

TALQ READY TO WORK WITH NEW QUEBEC GOVERNMENT

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MONTREAL, October 6, 2026 — TALQ congratulates Premier-elect Paul St-Pierre Plamondon and looks forward to working constructively with the new government on issues of importance to Quebec's English-speaking communities.

"We are ready to establish a productive relationship, as we have always done," said Eva Ludvig, President of TALQ. "TALQ will ensure that the next government knows that Quebec's English-speaking community is open and willing to work together. We look forward to seeing that commitment reflected in the government's actions."

In the immediate term, TALQ hopes to work with the new government to ensure access to electoral information in English. During the campaign, Premier-elect St-Pierre Plamondon questioned the value of challenging bilingual voter information, noting that voting is a fundamental right. "We welcome those comments and look forward to turning them into a constructive conversation," said Ludvig.

The election also produced a minority government, reflecting the diverse representation Quebecers have chosen in the National Assembly and creating a greater need for dialogue, cooperation, and consideration of different perspectives. TALQ will work to ensure that the priorities of English-speaking Quebecers are taken into account as the government develops its policies.

TALQ's recent community survey, which received more than 700 responses from across Quebec, found that English-speaking Quebecers are deeply rooted in the province and share many of the same priorities for its future as most Quebecers, particularly with respect to health care, education, and economic security.

"These results reinforce the importance of a constructive and dependable relationship between the Quebec government and English-speaking Quebecers," said Sylvia Martin-Laforge, Director General of TALQ. "We are not asking to stand apart from Quebec. We are asking to participate fully in its future and to be heard when decisions affect our communities."

"We will always be prepared to defend our community's rights and institutions," said Martin-Laforge. "At the same time, we believe the best way forward is through dialogue and engagement."

TALQ will seek an early meeting with the new government to begin that dialogue and discuss the priorities and concerns of English-speaking communities across Quebec.

TALQ (www.talq.ca) is a not-for-profit organization bringing together English-language community organizations and individuals across Quebec. Its mission is to identify, explore, and address strategic issues affecting the development and vitality of English-speaking Quebec and to encourage dialogue and collaboration.
